"I unhesitatingly add my testimony to the great benefits to be derived from Simmons Liver Regulator. I was afflicted for several years with disordered Liver, which resulted in a severe attack of Jaundice. I had good medical attendance, but it failed to restore me to the enjoyment of my former health. I then tried the most renowned physicians of Louisville, Ky., but all to no purpose, whereupon I was induced to try Simmons Liver Regulator. I found immediate benefit from its use, and it ultimately restored me to the full enjoyment of health."—A. H. PIANOS.
GAINED FIRST PREMIUM FOR GREATEST merit at the New Orleans Cotton Centennial and WORLE'S Exposition for refined and wonderful power of tone, elegance of design, and superb finish. Only piano endorsed by United States commissioners, from each of the States. Cases finest carved, rosewood finish—finest imported double repeating action—three strings throughout of best patent steel wire—keys best ivory. Our new patent steel tuning device, instead of wood, is the greatest invention ever made in pianos. It consists of stationary STEEL tuning pins that are set in a mold and molten STEEL is run round the pins keeping them solidly in place. A thimble or shell pin is made to exactly fit the stationary pin revolving therein: thus the strings wind round the pins. After the strings are properly stretched the piano can never get out of tune, the rest plank being of STEEL not affected by extremes of climate. This will be appreciated by all musicians in city or country. It will stand twenty years without tuning and is good for 100. No other piano has this improvement.

Great strength and durability is another advantage. In other pianos holes are bored in wooden boards and tuning pins inserted. The pins turn round in this board and cannot stand permanently in tune, and it often cracks, splits, drys out, becoming utterly, totally and entirely worthless as a musical instrument. Our STEEL tuning device is in no way affected by such casualities, and the sounding board is so constructed that our pianos can never become thin or metallic in tone. They are always in tune and the expense of tunning is saved. This patent alone is worth millions and makes our piano the greatest in the world. Prices are no higher than other pianos. Buying direct from us, the largest manufacturers, you save $100 or $200—dealers' profits. Don't mind the ominous growlings of dealers and agents, who see their chances of selling a poor piano at a big profit of $200—slipping away—pity them.

We guarantee our pianos ten years. 200 styles. We have put our prices at lowest bed-rock for Cash.

A $600 Piano for $259.50; a $900 Piano for $297.50; a $1200 Piano for $375.50; a $1500 Piano for $475.50.

Upright Cabinet Grands, with stool and rubber cover shipped on board cars at S. F., to any part of the United States, Canada or Mexico. Our terms are cash with order. If not as represented money returned. We occassionally have good second-hand pianos, made over at $100 to $300, which we take in part payment for our own. Write or call for catalogue, free.

THE WIND SWEPT WHEAT.

Faint, faint and clear
Faint as the music that in dreams we hear,
Sharing the curtain fold of sleep
That shuts away
The world's hoarse voice, the sights and sounds of day
Her sorry joys, her phantoms false and fleet;
So softly, softly stirs
The wind's low murmur in the rippled wheat

From west to east
The warm breath blows the slender heads droop low,
As if in prayer;
Again, more lightly tossed in merry play,
They bend and bow and sway,
With measured beat,
But never rest;
Through shadow and through sun
Goes on the tender rustle of the wheat.

Dreams, more than sleep,
Fall on the listening heart and lull its care;
Dead years send back
That treasured half forgotten time,
Ah, long ago;
When sun and sky were sweet;
In happy noon,
We stood breast high mid waves of ripened green
And heard the wind make music in the wheat!

Not for today
Not for this hour alone the melody.
So soft and ceaseless, thrills the dreamer's ear!
Of all that was, and is, of all that yet shall be
It holds a part;
Love, sorrow, longing, pain,
The restlessness that yearns,
The thirst that burns,
The bliss that like a fountain overflows,
The deep repose,
Good that we might have known, but shall not know
The hope God took, the joy he made complete;
Life's chords all answer from the wind swept wheat.

—Mary Alice De Vere in Phrenological Journal.

The Time to Sleep.

Another important hygienic rule is never to thwart that advance guard of sleep—the drowsy impulse, which in healthy individuals will be found to occur about the same hour each night. At its approach the individual should invariably betake himself to rest, nor should he tarry until this drowsiness verges on unconsciousness, but at the very first intimation of brain weariness he should seek to assume a horizontal position as quickly as possible. If this rule be scrupulously maintained it will usually be found that sleep supervenes almost as the head touches the pillow, if there has been no previous abuse of the pleasures of the table. If, however, there has been gormandizing and abuse of wine shortly before retiring the aspirant for honors in the arena of cerebral combat must not be surprised if he be subjected to all the inconveniences of semi consciousness, total inability to sleep, or sleep in which all the terrors of nightmare are unrolled before the irritated imagination.—Dr. J Leonard Corning

How a Woman Is Won.

Good looks cut a small figure in love making, and lucre plays no part at all in youth. People have to get old before they become sordid and then love has taken wings. A man may have a voice like an unhinged barn door, a nose like a cucumber, a foot like a fiddle box, hands like hams, teeth like a step ladder, eyes like a jay's and a mouth like a cellar door, and if he sues judiciously no arrows of misfortune can keep the wreath from his brow provided he keeps clean shaven, clean linen and a clean mouth. He may be attenuated to the very verge of emaciation or be elephantine in movements and dimensions but perfumed with the scent of fresh linen and possessed of wit enough to use his tongue, he may win any woman whom he studies with care.—Chicago Times.

A Strange Hereditary Peculiarity.

The duke of Simonetta, an Italian noble man, who is making a name as a musical composer, is the descendant of a long line of dukes who have a strange peculiarity. They have jet black hair, and just above the forehead a white tuft. This they had for a long series of years, until the father of the present duke was born some sixty years ago. He had a thick, curly head of brown hair, without a particle of white, and with him it was supposed there was an end of the special mark. But his son is a tall, handsome man, with a head of black hair, and he has exactly the same white tuft.—New Orleans Times Democrat.

Collection of Great Men's Chairs.

A collection of great men's chairs recently sold in London was interesting. The plainest of all was a little, stiff arm chair of oak said to be that in which Shakespeare wrote. John Gay had an elaborate chair, with broad well stuffed arms and seat, and provided with branches for candles at the elbows, a flap for a desk and a drawer in the seat for pens, ink and paper. Walter Savage Landor had a huge curule of rough oak, with stout arms. Byron's chair was a handsome Louis XIV chair, well stuffed and covered with red Utrecht velvet.—Chicago Herald.

Two Systems of Lunching.

Stranger (in Omaha)—How much is this lunch?

Barkeeper—Nothing. That is a free lunch, sir. We do not charge for it. You owe 20 cents for drinks, though.

"Eh? You charge for the drinks and throw the lunch in?"

"Yes."

"That's a new idea to me. Down in Kansas they charge for the lunch and throw the drinks in."—Omaha World.

Not Beaconsfield's Favorite.

It is said that the primrose was not Lord Beaconsfield's favorite flower at all, and that the story that it was arose from the fact that the queen sent to grace his coffin a wreath of those flowers with a card bearing the inscription, in her own handwriting, "His favorite flower." But she meant the favorite of her own husband, Prince Albert, not of Lord Beacons field.—New York Sun.

Piling It On.

Nan—Do you like Miss Coupon?

Phyllis—No, I can't say that I do. She puts on too many airs.

Nan—Airs! Well, I should say she did. Why, she just piles cyclones on top of tornadoes.—Philadelphia Call.

Japan's Development.

The recent development of industrial and commercial enterprise in Japan has been very great. Since January, 1887, 331 companies have been started.—New York Tribune.

Don't ornament truth. It doesn't need it, and, besides, embellishment gives it much the appearance of a lie.

The bloom stalk of a century plant at a Florida exposition grows at the rate of six inches a day.

Sleep is the parenthesis in sorrow's tale.

A HOME IN ALGIERS.

A GLIMPSE OF QUIET COUNTRY LIFE AMONG THE MOORS.

English Travelers Entertained at a Pretty Villa—A Group of Kabyle Peasants. Flirting with a Handsome Kabyle Girl. Tea and Cake.

The road to Tikserian winds over the smiling green hills of the Sahel, among fields and vineyards and white Arab houses, and descends at last through a deep rocky ravine to an old Moorish aqueduct, thrown boldly with gray arches across the bottom of the valley. We pass under the aqueduct with its moldering round arches, on one of whose grim stones some Spanish Christian slave carved long ago the dim and half obliterated inscription, "Ano 1798;" we turn aside for a moment to the gray Moorish village that clings to the hillside, with its tumble down houses and its open air cafe, where Arabs loll at ease in picturesque attitudes, propped on bare elbows, and discuss our personal appearance with evident frankness; we drink from the cool water of the ancient marble fountain, that invariable accompaniment of all North African hamlets; and then we continue our way on foot by a rocky path, bordered with asphodel and the tiny blue Sicilian iris, to the Arab house itself, in whose hospitable courtyard we mean to drink the national beverage under a cool portico. The villa belongs, in fact, to a rich old native gentleman in Algiers, who comes out here only for his summer villeggiatura, and we have obtained his leave today to descend upon it in force, to the evident surprise, delight and amusement of its amiable little horde of Kabyle caretakers.

Nothing we have seen in Algiers has been quite so genuinely native as this, and nothing at first sight has so unreservedly charmed us. We enter the villa through an outer farm yard, which leads by an arched doorway to the actual arcaded court yard of the house. Opening this door, a delicious native picture bursts at once upon our sight. Through the half circle of the arch we see in front of us a tiled floor, overshadowed by ancient, gnarled orange trees; a central marble fountain, bubbling up and overflowing with limpid water into a cool basin; an Arab home of antique, flat roofed architecture, set on one side, with its open colonnade of daintily sculptured pillars occupying the other, and in the midst of all, lighting it up with their graceful presence and free ease of movement, a pretty group of five assorted Kabyle peasants. Two were old women, still lithe and active, with uncovered faces and tattooed foreheads. One was a mother in the prime of life, with her 2-year-old baby in her brown arms, and one was a young girl of extraordinary beauty, well built and high stepping, round of arm and rich of bosom as a Greek statue. It was the Orient at home; we paused and looked and admired it silently. The men were absent. I cannot honestly say we missed them.

That Kabyle baby, in particular, was a perfect little model. He toddled about the court yard in his naked feet, he had shuffled off his wee slippers in a far corner, with a tiny burnous thrown around his fat, small body and a miniature cowl over his round little head, as quaint and comic a human figure as ever I have seen in the course of many wanderings. We asked leave by pantomime to light our etna and make our tea under the shade of the colonnade, and our Kabyle hostess, catching readily at our meaning, accorded her permission with a friendly smile. The handsome girl, going out into the front yard, lighted a fire of sticks hastily with her beautiful hands, and set to work in a tiny little cabin of a kitchen to prepare us a sort of griddle cake in a round pan, while the baby stood by with his big, grave eyes, and seemed no more afraid of the Christian intruders than of his own friends in the court yard close by. Meanwhile the old women also busied themselves to make us a bowl of the national dish, cous-cous, a sort of porridge pounded from the semolina of hard wheat.

The Kabyle women do not veil their faces, like the Arabs, nor are they afraid of strangers; on the contrary, our beautiful friend who was making the griddle cake seemed distinctly to understand the civilized European art of flirting. She blew the fire from time to time with her own pretty lips, and then turned round to us those languid large eyes of hers as if to demand our instant admiration; she allowed the wind to rustle open the haik that covered her full neck, and then gathered it together coquettishly with a twist of her fingers, yet not so tight as quite to prevent it from revealing to us every now and again the statuesque perfection of her lovely shoulder. She was light as a Christian and almost blue eyed. "Genseric and his Vandals," said the ethnologist of our party. I don't know myself; I only know for certain she was well favored and a bonny lass of whatever extraction, Aryan or Semitic.

By and by the kettle boiled, and we sat down on the edge of the old tiled floor, with the water gurgling at us in the marble basin, and drank our four cups of 5 o'clock tea under archways that then, for the first time, no doubt, made acquaintance with the savor of our British beverage. Our Kabyle baby friend toddled up and eyed our cake askance with curious and eager eyes; we gave him a piece and he ran back to the house with it, but, whether on religious or digestive grounds I know not, a loud cry, exceedingly western in note, shortly announced that his cruel mother had taken it away from him. We appeased him with a small bit of bread and ham, which no rule of the Prophet seemed to forbid. After tea we held high palaver at the door; the Kabyle women displayed their jewelry, and took us over their house, from the porch with its look out, where the Moorish women made sure they might venture forth unveiled into the court, to the flat roof with its splendid view over hill and ravine and aged cluster of waving palm trees.

The pretty Kabyle girl followed us timidly up the stairs, but fled coquettish, when we turned and looked at her, into dark side chambers. Even the staircase had its dado of rich tiles, and the best bedroom was a miniature museum of Oriental domestic architecture. We went down once more, and pressed five francs into our hostess' dusky hand. She took it with a graceful outer show of reluctance, and signified by pantomime her undying regret that we couldn't wait to taste their cous-cous. But we had seen it pounded, and we fled that ordeal. Time excused us. The pretty girl peeped out at us archly from a doorway as we left, and the 2-year-old Kabyle in the cowl and hood stared after us long with inquiring eyes till Don Quixote and the cake basket faded away forever from his horizon in the distance.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Home Life of Persian Girls.

They wear the "piraban," a shirt which buttons on the shoulder and is worn by boys also, baggy drawers called "chaukchoor," another pair called "shalwar mezannee" and a third pair termed "zeerjannia;" then they have on an "arkhalook," only of a different pattern from that of the boys, a little jacket of velvet or silk, often embroidered beautifully or decorated with gold lace, and on their feet they wear tiny slippers and stockings. When they appear in the street, though, they must in addition to all this put a long loose wrap of indigo blue called "chaddor" around them, covering the whole form, and over their faces they hang a veil or "roubaud," fastened behind their ears by the clasp or "chaprast." These last mentioned things no well behaved little girl of 7 or more is without in the open air.

The girls do not go to school, but remain at home with their mothers. If they have been receiving some lessons from the "laleh" of their brothers, that is all they will ever be taught. It is exceedingly rare, even among the daughters of the wealthy and powerful, to find a girl who can read or write. But they are taught to play on the lute, to overlook the servants, to prepare tea, coffee and sherbet, and especially to do fine needlework and embroidery. In this last respect the Persian girls are quite superior. I have seen cloths so beautifully and tastefully embroidered with gold thread, and also raised work in silk and velvet, done by girls of 10 or 12, as I have never seen elsewhere. From their 9th year on the girls must never go out of the house unveiled. So will it the law and custom. They from that time on give all their time and all their thoughts to dress, and they embroider and embellish so many "shalwar" and "zeerjannia" that it seems a puzzle how they can wear them all out in a lifetime. A few years later they marry, and then they are kept shut up by their husbands, so they don't profit greatly by marriage.—Wolf von Schierbrand in The Cosmopolitan.

The Flesh of Diseased Animals.

It is held also by many, even amongst those who are not vegetarians, that some serious diseases which now affect the human family would be prevented if animal food were not part of human sustenance. It is urged that flesh derived from diseased animals finds its way freely into the human body, and that by its introduction diseases are introduced.

The fact that the flesh of diseased animals does find its way into the market and on to the table is beyond question. Our wise and discerning Jewish brethren have taught us this truth in unmistakable form. They, in obedience to their ancient law, have all their animal food duly inspected. Their returns on the subject are worth recording. In 1878, out of 22,308 oxen killed in London no fewer than 7,885, or nearly a third, were rejected as diseased. Out of 3,330 calves 785 were rejected. Out of 41,556 sheep 13,019 were rejected. In the year 1879, in the course of fifty weeks, out of a total of 22,387 oxen 9,531 were rejected; out of a total of 3,691 calves 1,028 were rejected; of 38,332 sheep 11,826 were rejected. In 1880, from July 1 to Dec. 25—twenty-five weeks—out of 18,116 oxen 6,143 were rejected. Of calves numbering 1,964 as many as 664 were rejected, and out of 19,743 sheep 5,535 were refused for food because of the presence of disease.

If this analysis be applied to the animal food consumed outside the Jewish pale in the United Kingdom, about one-third of such food gives some evidence of disease, so that flesh eaters who are not Jews can partaking of diseased flesh during four months of each year of their lives.—Benjamin Ward Richardson in Longman's Magazine.

Bondage of the Russian Serf.

There is plenty of evidence that the Russian serfs, supposed in England to have been so torpid, writhed fiercely under their bondage. Brigandage became the normal disease of Russia, for the brigands were bands of escaped serfs who sometimes banded into armies and threatened or pillaged cities. Each pretender was dreaded because he offered protection to the serfs, and their attachment was the single reason for the rise of the ruffian Pugatscheff, a mere marauder, who gathered armies of 30,000 and shook the throne of the great Catherine. Moreover, M. Rambaud brings out the fact that down to a very late period the serfage hampered the czars, the people hating the system so fiercely that Russian statesmen informed the court that if an invader issued a decree of enfranchisement all patriotism would disappear.

A population so embittered against its owners naturally looked to the central authority, as it had done when oppressed by less regular means. This feeling of reliance on the central power manifested all through Russian history might not of itself have built the autocracy, but that the house of Rurik, always self willed and fierce, felt that only in perfect personal power—power as of deity—could they find protection against the nobles and dependent princes who from age to age threatened even their lives. It was necessary, if they were to reign at all, to reign fiercely, to allow of no resistance, to destroy whole families leagued against the throne. Czars and people therefore played into each other's hands, until at last Peter the Little could say with truth that in Russia no one was important except the man whom the czar addressed, and he only so long as the czar addressed him.—London Spectator.

An Advertiser of Chewing Gum.

The foremost belle and beauty of a large tobacco factory on the east side has quit the rolling of cigarettes, removed the stain of tobacco from her fingers, and is on exhibition in a Bowery dime museum. If she were heiress to a million her loveliness would be lauded beyond that of any girl in Sweildom. She is a blonde, perfect in shapeliness and beautiful in face. What is she doing in the museum? She is chewing gum. One of the manufacturers and heavy advertisers of gum has contracted with the manager of the show for her appearance. She sits on a raised platform along with an assortment of freaks. She wears a rich evening dress of white satin. Her hair is dressed in the latest style, and altogether she has an air of delicate high breeding. For full twelve hours a day she is on duty. Her jaws seem tireless, and with a few intermissions for rest she chews away at a cud of gum, paying no particular heed to the jocose spectators, making no answers to their remarks, and deriving apparent satisfaction from the admiration which she feels that she excites. Besides, there is the pay in cash, the amount of which nobody outside the deal knows. Behind her are emblazoned the announcements that she chews a certain make of gum only, and boxes of it are piled around her. A boy sells the gum to whoever chooses to buy, but the main idea is to make the visitors to the museum go out and talk about the odd sight, and thus create a new demand for the article.—New York Sun.

SHOULD SERVE AS A WARNING.

The threatened destruction of the town by the fire fiend last Tuesday night ought to serve as a warning to our people to be prepared to protect their property by the organization of a fire department. The water supply too, should be looked after. In the absence of these essentials for fighting fire it was simply a miracle that the business portion of the town did not pay the penalty of the apparent indifference of its people to this important matter. Some time since was pointed out in these columns the necessity of bonding the town to raise money for organizing, among other things, a fire department. The suggestion was like a fire-brand to the old silurians of Sonoma, and the cry went up that the INDEX-TRIBUNE must be sat down upon for daring to agitate so revolutionary a proposition. They looked upon it as an innovation upon the old-time customs of the town, and such a howl went up against the proposition and those who had the temerity to favor it for a time it seemed as though bedlam itself had broken loose.

In view of the fact that every effort made to organize a fire department for this city by public subscription has met with failure, owing to the very ones who cry down bonding the town for such a purpose declining to subscribe the necessary money, it would appear that they are opposed to all public improvements of this nature on general principles. Another lesson like that of Tuesday night will no doubt bring all such to their proper senses and cause them to put their hands in their pockets and draw forth a liberal subscription for organizing a fire company and improving our water system. Or, failing in this, induce them to withdraw their objections to bonding the town for the town's salvation.

THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The Republican National Convention assembled at Chicago on Tuesday last, and up to the time of adjourment on Thursday night had progressed so far as to formulate a platform which was passed by the Convention unanimously by a rising vote and complete the call of the States for nominations, when the convention adjourned until 11 A. M., yesterday. Up to the hour of closing our forms for the press no news of the nomination of candidates for President or Vice President has reached us, though appearances indicate that a dead-lock would hold the convention through several ballots, when a stampede for Blaine, California taking the lead, would decide the contest and the agony will be over.

GEO. B. BAER of the Reveille has published a neat and interesting handbook descriptive of Cloverdale and vicinity. It is replete with information for home-seekers and will no doubt be of immense benefit to his section by making its advantages and resources known to the outside world.

AT an auction sale of California fruits in New York, Tuesday, apricots sold at $1 85 to $1 50, and royal plums $1 95 to $1 30. The latter were too small for the market and the lots were in rather poor condition, some lots leaking.

Worth Knowing.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe Cold, attended with a distressing Cough and running into Consumption in its first stages. He tried many so-called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. Was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about a half dozen bottles found himself well and has had no return of the disease. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures, as Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. Guaranteed to do just what is claimed for it. Trial bottle free at E. Wegner's Drug Store.

THE GOLDEN SPIKE.

The celebration on Wednesday at Santa Rosa in commemoration of the completion of the railroad from Napa Junction to Santa Rosa through Sonoma Valley was an event long to be remembered. The driving of the golden spike, with the ceremonies usual on such occasions, was witnessed by a large concourse of people from San Francisco, Oakland and other cities, besides many thousands from every part of Sonoma and adjacent counties. Early in the morning people in carriages and every kind of vehicles, on horseback and on foot, began to arrive, followed soon after by railroad trains from north and south and by every avenue of approach to Santa Rosa by rail, until the handsome little city was packed almost to suffocation with busy, restless humanity. There was scarcely standing room for the great throng within hearing distance of those officiating in the ceremonies. It is estimated that one thousand persons—men, women and children—gathered there from Sonoma Valley alone. On the arrival of the train from San Francisco the multitude was called to order when the programme was gone through with, closing with a feast of barbacued meats and other edibles and winding up with a grand ball in the evening.

The completion of the Santa Rosa and Carquinez Railroad will mark the beginning of a new era in Sonoma Valley, being fraught with, we hope, great benefit to the general public. Though apt to prove disastrous to some localities by destroying their advantages of position this will be compensated for by the building up of new interests through improved facilities for transportion and commerce which will stimulate manufacturing and encourage production.

It is well known that the building of railroads through a country destroys local interests in one locality and builds up greater interests and creates more general presperity in another. This is a fact which all should comprehend and submit to without a murmer, as it necessarily follows in the wake of the march of improvement and progress. The operation of this road inaugurates and sets in motion the means and appliances which produce those great changes which business men and all interested in production and traffic in this valley ought to at once comprehend and turn to their profit by taking immediate advantage of the new condition of things.

Labor in Vineyards.

The St. Helena Star of last week writes in relation to labor during the wine-making season. The reference made to supplying better accommodations for employes at such times is in accordance with our belief, and just what we have advocated in these columns. In the great hop-growing districts of the East, each hop-grower has extra bedding, dishes, tables, etc., for the accommodation of respectable people whom they employ during the hop-picking season—often to the number of a hundred, and more. The same will finally be true here among grape-growers; and as the climate is mild, the necessary room can be temporarily furnished at far less expense than at the East. Chinese will not always pick as many California grapes as they do now. White help for such work is going to be more plentiful, and grape-growers will have it in preference to any other; but the necessary accommodations will have to be supplied. The paper mentioned says: "Now that everything promises well for a very fair yield this season, the question of labor naturally comes up. This question seems to be quite generally agitated throughout the State at present. There seems to be a scarcity of help and the shrewd Chinese have grasped the situation and are demanding an increase in their wages. This is naturally to be expected. It will be remembered that although the crops were short last year, there was a scarcity of labor, and now that we are to have a good yield it behooves our vineyard men to look ahead a little. There is one advantage this section enjoys. As the vintage season comes after the harvesting of hay and grain, a large number of men can be engaged for handling the grapes; but even this is not a sufficient guarantee there will be plenty of help by any means. There is one thing which should be remedied, and that is, the lack of accommodations for hired help during the vintage season. The average laboring man is opposed to sleeping in haystacks and old barns, and he is not to be blamed. If all our vineyard men should adopt some plan of giving the young school-boys and girls work in our vineyards; but, as things new are, no mother would wish to have any of her children at work unless they were employed near enough to town to be at home of nights."—Independent Calistogian.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, June 15, 1888.

The political world is stirred considerably below its surface over the rumors concerning Secretary Whitney's retirement from the Cabinet next year. While a second term of Mr. Cleveland is far enough off to render speculation hazardous, there do seem to be some good grounds for these rumors. The Secretary himself refuses either to affirm or deny the reports. He says it would be indelicate for him to do either. If he affirmed the rumors he would be telling the public before he told the President, and if he denies them he would be assuming that the President, in case he is re-elected, is going to ask him to continue in his Cabinet. In fact Mr. Whitney says that the rumors are neither true nor false. His career as Secretary of the Navy has not been a sinecure. When he assumed charge of the Department he instituted a reform in the matter of accounts. Before that time each bureau had the power to draw on its own account for stores and other materials needed. Mr. Whitney consolidated this system and issued an order directing that all requisitions should be made through the Pay Department. This course aroused the half-hidden antagonism of certain Naval officers, who were obliged to wait occasionally for their money longer than it suited them, and many things occurred which indicated internal friction. Another cause of annoyance to the Secretary was his trouble with the Ordnance Bureau, occasioned by the slowness with which the armament for the new cruisers is being made. The gun factory at the Washington yard, was one of his pet plans, and its only partial success, it is said, has irritated him beyond endurance. Then there has arisen a renewed strife between the two elements of discord in the Navy, the line and staff, and each side has petitioned the Secretary until he has allowed himself to express openly, at times, sentiments which showed an ill-concealed distaste for this sort of work. He is also credited with all sorts of ambitious plans, one of which is to obtain the Democratic nomination for Governer of New York. Another rumor says it is a foreign mission—the ideal office in the estimation of his wife—and yet another goes higher and says he is thinking about 1892, when the Democratic party will want another middle aged man for a Presidential candidate, and a man who has such strong financial backing as Mr. Whitney is said to possess.

Last week quite a number of Democratic Senators and Representatives were absent attending the St. Louis Convention. This week the absentees are Republicans, and Chicago is for the time the political centre.

Congress, in the meantime, is discussing such questions as the Fisheries Treaty, the tariff, silver, Government bond buying, and a great deal of politics. The latter material finds its way into every debate, no matter how irrelevant to the subject before either House. But this is a Presidential campaign session, and as much must be expected.

Everybody in Washington is talking politics. The placing of the Democratic ticket and platform, and the impending Republican Convention with its uncertainty and doubt, have invested the situation with hot interest. From the Democratic attitude of certainty to the Republican dilemma is like turning from a calm to a storm. Sherman, Allison, Gresham, Alger, Depew, Phelps, Morton and a dozen lesser lights are in the arena, thick and getting thicker.

Before you get this letter you will know all about Chairman Jones' third letter from Mr. Blaine, asserting that he would not accept the Presidential nomination if it were tendered him unanimously, which, at the present writing, is the most interesting rumor from a Republican source.

The Postmaster-General is busily preparing the Postoffice Department exhibit to be sent to the Cincinnati Exposition, which opens July 4. It will include a regularly equipped postoffice for the transaction of business—specimens of all the equipments used in the transaction of business, and everything that may be necessary to properly illustrate the history, management and progress of the mail service.

To-day the friends and attendants around the residence of General Sherdian look more hopeful than for some time past, and the bulletins regarding his condition are rather more favorable. The periodical return of the heart failure has occurred at intervals of three days. This is the fourth day, and no trouble as yet.

A Quail Story.

Last week a Portuguese farmer living in this township noticed a hen quail with what he at first supposed were four little quail running and feeding with his chickens. He noticed, however, that when he approached the old quail she would fly upon or just over the barnyard fence, but her four little ones would remain upon the ground. Upon closer examination he discovered that the little ones were really chickens and had been hatched from four hen's eggs laid in the barn. The quail had evidently squatted upon them and driven the hen away after she had laid the four eggs.

The farmer says that when the mother quail would hover the four chicks she would have to spread herself, and they would sometimes raise her off her feet. After a few days the farmer thoughtlessly took the chicks away from their quail mother and gave them to a hen with other little chickens about the same age. The quail after mourning a day or two, finding she could not reclaim her little brood left the place.—Petaluma Courier.

A WOMAN'S WAY.

A Startling Business Proposition.

A little over six weeks ago Mrs. Fowler of 327 Ellis street, San Francisco, stopped in at a leading city druggist's to ask what effect Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla, about which she had heard so much recently, would have in cases of dyspepsia and sick headache. She was assured that in most cases it would relieve both. She was, however, so incredulous that finally the druggist gave her a bottle, not to be paid for unless it effected a cure. A proposition so startlingly practical has seldom, if ever before, been made. The following just received is the convincing conclusion, and tells its own story:

San Francisco, February 8, 1888.

DEAR SIR: I write to admit that, notwithstanding my misgivings, Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla did all that you promised. I had tried so many prescriptions, to no purpose, that I had come to believe nothing would relieve my dyspepsia and sick headaches, but I have not had a return of either since I commenced taking it. I believe I am permanently cured, but will, out of an abundance of caution, continue to take it regularly for a while yet. You have my permission to make this public, for it is my belief that a remedy that will cure dyspepsia and prevent sick headaches should be generally known. Respectfully,

Mrs. M. Fowler,
327 Ellis street.

A LUCKY TRIAL.

DEAR SIR: It affords me great pleasure to send you this voluntary statement of my experience in testing the merits of Joy's Sarsaparilla. For the past five years I have been troubled with an exceedingly sluggish liver, and within the past two years it has brought within its trail a thoroughly disordered stomach, including loss of appetite and distress after eating, pains in the back and kidneys, and boils around my neck and face. I have tried several remedies which are advertised as specially for the liver, and never could get more than temporary relief of about a week or two. I was recommended to try a bottle of Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla as a test, and while taking the first bottle I became convinced of its merits for I could feel it was working a change in me. I have taken five bottles, and during that time my troubles have left me. Everything is working full and regular, in fact it has cleansed, purified and braced me up generally. I feel like a new man. You are at perfect liberty to use this as you see fit, or you can refer whom you please to

PRETTY TALK!

We are not closing out: we are not selling at half price; we are not offering auction goods or goods bought at Sheriff's sale or obtained through the misfortune of our fellow men at less than one-half their real value. You see and hear this kind of pretty talk all over town. It is used to entrap the ignorant and inexperienced, and is seldom, if ever, true. Our patons, we are glad to say, belong to

They are intelligent and economical, pay cash for what they want, and expect good value for the money. We talk plainly to them, and try to present things as they really are. We have a large stock of goods and a wonderful variety of useful things, bought on the best terms from reliable manufacturers and dealers. If we see a chance to secure a good brrgain, we accept it, and give our customers the benefit of our opportunity, but never at the expense of quality or reputation. Just now we have some Raisins, very good to cook, at 4c and 5c, and Figs, Pears, Apricots, Prunes, Plums, Apples or Peaches at 5c, and all good value. Next week we publish our new list. The proficiency of the band may be judged by the appreciable manner in which the several selections were rendered. The band was a valuable acquisition to the celebration.

FIRE.

Narrow Escape of a Family—The Town in Peril.

On Tuesday night last about ten o'clock a cry of "fire" was heard and in a few seconds the heavens were lit up with lurid flames which burst forth from the doors and windows of Brickey's new drug store on the corner of Napa street and First street west. In a short time a large number of people were on the ground, and as it was evident that the drug store was doomed the efforts of those who had come to the rescue were directed toward saving the Union Hotel and Wegner's drug store, situated on opposite corners of the burning building. For some time there was imminent danger of both structures falling victims to the devouring element, in which event the greater part of the business portion of the town would have been reduced to ashes. Owing to the great exertions of the volunteer fire-fighters, however, the flames were confined to the new drug store and a small building adjoining, which, together with their contents, were entirely consumed.

The fire was caused by the explosion of a coal oil lamp. It appears Mr. Brickey was engaged in opening a case of goods with a hatchet, which, flying off the handle, struck the lamp, causing it to explode. Instantly the place was enveloped in flames. Seeing that it was impossible to put the fire out he went to the rescue of his wife and children who were sleeping in a room off from the store. He caught up the children and carried them to a place of safety and returned for his wife, who through fright had failed to follow him. Upon reaching the room a second time he found his wife had swooned away, and as all exit had been cut off from the doors he broke the window sash facing Napa street and thrust her through. By this time the heat and smoke had rendered him almost helpless and he was so weak that he could not climb out of the window, and gave himself up for lost. His shouts, however, attracted the attention of several men and it was some seconds owing to the smoke and flame, before he could be located. Mat Hulbred, a block-maker, was the first to discover the nigh-suffocated man, and grasping him by the arm pits he dragged him through the window and undoubtedly saved his life.

The buildings destroyed were one-story frame affairs, valued at about $700. They were owned by Don Vasquez and were uninsured. There was an insurance of $1800 on Mr. Brickey's drug stock and household furniture in the New Zealand fire insurance company, which will fully cover his loss.

Returned to Napa Asylum.

E. W. Pierce, at one time a prosperous photographer of Los Angeles, and who went insane over losses in real estate speculations at the time of the boom in that city and was committed to the Napa asylum and subsequently discharged as cured, was returned to that institution last Saturday. The unfortunate man at the time of his release, about two months ago, was brought to this town by his wife in the hopes that change of scene and climate would ultimately lead to his entire recovery. For a time he seemed to improve, but several weeks ago, he grew worse and one day last week he strayed off and a search being instituted for him, he was found a short distance from town lying on his back with the blazing hot sun shining in his face, perfectly oblivious to his surroundings. He was taken to the asylum by Constable Sparks and when he came in sight of that institution he realized his condition and begged the officer in piteous tones to take him back to Sonoma.

The Railroad Subsidy.

The Santa Rosa Democrat states that T. J. Field, Supervisor of Monterey county and one of the right-of-way agents of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, is in that city collecting the $40,000 subsidy subscribed by the citizens of the county last year. A number of the notes were paid yesterday. It is an incident worthy of notice that those who first redeemed their paper were among the last to subscribe. Mr. Field has taken up his quarters at Reynolds & Wood's office. Many of those who subscribed largely to the subsidy made notes in favor of the Santa Rosa and Benicia Central Railroad Company under which corporation name the project had its inception two years ago. Yesterday an order was made by the president of the company authorizing the Santa Rosa Bank and National Bank, in whose vaults the notes have laid since they were executed, to return them on demand.

Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain." Burris vs. Fitch.

The Supreme Court has reversed the judgment and remanded the cause for a new trial in the land suit of Burris vs. Fitch. In the lower court judgment was given for plaintiff. In reviewing the findings of that tribunal the Supreme court say: "The findings here are of the probative rather than of the ultimative facts. In that respect they are unsatisfactory, and while they manifestly do not justify the judgment, we are not satisfied that they would justify a judgment for the defendants. Instead, therefore, of reversing the judgment and directing that one be entered for the defendants, we have concluded to reverse the judgment and order a new trial. In this way we think a more satisfactory result may be reached.

This controversy is as to the boundary line between two tracts of land, one of which is owned by plaintiffs and the other by defendant. The plaintiffs settled upon the tract claimed by them in the year 1851, and procured a conveyance of it in 1858. Defendants' grantors procured a conveyance of the tract claimed by them in 1851. Both conveyances are from the town or city of Sonoma. The lot conveyed to defendants' grantors is described as lot No. 554, which is bounded on the east by a line known as the Trancas line, an indeterminate line, run by O'Farrell and Hudspeth in 1847. Defendants' grantors, Lyon and Sneed, to whom said town or city of Sonoma conveyed said lot 554, inclosed with it a small strip of land east of said Trancas line on which they had previously hauled a small dwelling-house. Between 1855 and 1858 Lyon built a small barn to the eastward of his dwelling and east of the fence built by him and Sneed, and inclosed about half an acre, on which the barn stood. In January, 1868, one Stanley purchased said lot, No. 554, and built a fence on the easterly line of the demanded premises, and occupied said premises from the date of his purchase until 1873, but never claimed eastward beyond the Trancas line. Stanley built the fence at his own expense without saying anything to the plaintiffs on the subject. After completing the fence he requested plaintiffs to convey to him, Stanley, the demanded premises, which they refused to do. In 1873 Stanley, when about to sell lot No. 554 to one Yates, pointed out to Yates the situation as he Stanley, understood it, but told Yates that he, Stanley, did not know where the true east line of lot No. 554 was, but he supposed, from what he had been told, that it ran between the dwelling house and the barn. That none of the deeds of conveyance to the defendants or their granters purport on their face to convey any land except lot No. 554. In 1860 plaintiffs filed a declaration of homestead covering the entire tract conveyed to them by the city or town of Sonoma."

Inhuman Parents.

The Santa Rosa Republican says: The touching scene of a little girl making legal complaint against her father and mother for cruelty in their treatment toward her was presented Friday morning in the police court. She claims, and D. M. Kimes corroborates her statement, that her father, Henry Straussman, unmercifully beats her and drives her from home. She was compelled to get her parents two gallons of wine within the last week and, on account of her failure to earn money and give it to them, she claims, that while in a drunken condition they maltreated her. The parties living near them confirm her story, and the man and his wife are under arrest. The girl wants to have them restricted so that she will be protected; making affidavit that she believes her life is in danger.

A Warning.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from diseases of the Throat and Lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone without exception, receives vast numbers of Tubercle Germs into the system and where these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the lungs producing Consumption and to the head, causing Catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to proceed will in time cause death. At the onset you must act with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may lose you your life. As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your Throat, Lungs or Nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief.

Tuesday morning Mrs. Charles Humphreys of Petaluma, upon opening her front door about daylight, found wrapped in a fruit box a little white girl baby, alive but sound asleep. It was dressed in new but plain clothes. She also found a bottle of milk, five dollars in money and a note in pencil asking her to raise the child as her own. The writer said she was a respectable woman, but too poor and unhealthy to raise the babe. She said it was born June 1st. The babe is very pretty and unusually bright for its age. The mother concealed her identity so well that there is not even a suspicion as to her name.

A Stab in the Dark

Sometimes fails of its murderous intent. The insidious and dastardly attacks made upon the reputation of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters by persons who seek to palm off cheap and fiery tonics as identical with it, or "the same thing under another name," or "equally as good," in most instances react disastrously upon the unprincipled traders upon popular credulity who attempt them, converting their speculations into ruinous failures. The Bitters is a pure, wholesome and thorough medicine, adapted to the total cure and prevention of fever and ague, bilious remittent, dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, debility, nervousness and kidney troubles. Its every ingredient, unlike those in the imitations of it, is of an ascertained standard of excellence, and while they, by reason of their fiery properties, react injuriously upon the brain and nervous system, of both those organs it is a sedative and invigorant. Refuse all these harmful imitations.

MAKING STRAW HATS.

HOW THE INDUSTRY HAS GROWN IN THIS COUNTRY.

Successive Steps by Which the Grass of China Becomes a Hat in America—Why Bleached Hats Turn Yellow—Finishing Touches.

The manufacture of straw hats, though not peculiarly American, has attained immense proportions in this country. Over in Brooklyn, in some of the quiet streets between the city hall district and Broadway, are a number of straw hat manufactories, some of which give employment to more than two hundred hands, besides a lot of the most ingenious and skillfully devised machinery. Most of this machinery is of American invention. With it ten times more work can be turned out by the skilled operative than by the old hand process, and yet better wages made at less labor.

The straw hat of civilization is nearly a century old, and its manufacture was not begun in Brooklyn to any extent until about eleven years ago. The raw material is all imported, and, in fact, reaches the manufacturer here in a considerably advanced stage of preparation. It comes from China, Japan and southern Europe chiefly. Years ago, when straw goods brought higher prices, braids woven with Tuscan straw, and that from Bohemia and Switzerland, were exclusively used, but they are now employed only for the finest grades. The cheaper qualities for the masses, such as the "Mackinaws," are almost entirely made with the straw braid imported from China. This was found to be less expensive than any other, because the cost of living among the producers amounts to almost nothing.

THE CHIP HAT.

The Leghorn hat is made entirely in Italy, and only the finishing is done in this country. Chip and Panama hats, although sold under the general denomination of straws, are made in fact from entirely different material. The chip is so called because made from the splints of the Lombardy poplar, out of which the sap has been dried by burial in the ground for three years—a precaution taken to prevent it from turning red, which happens when dried in the air. The Panama is made from the immature leaves of a palm tree indigenous to South America.

The district of China where straw braid is made lies in the region of Canton, and many millions of people are employed in its production. Living principally on fruits, which the soil of that country naturally yields, and with no inclination to do more profitable work, it is often the only occupation that all the members of the family engage in. The average wages earned are a penny a day. When the species of grass or wheat used for making the straw has attained its full height, and before it is quite ripe, it is cut down, left on the ground and allowed to bleach in the sun. This process being completed, the stalks are bound in sheaves about a foot in circumference and then drawn out as wanted. After severing them at the joints into strips four or five inches in length, they are put into a kind of a sieve and sorted in equal sizes. Those at the top being finer have a greater value than the lower or coarser ones. These pieces are in turn separated and tied into bundles of convenient size. Those of good color are laid aside for bleaching, while those spotted or discolored are dyed and used with the bleached to make variegated braids. The solid colors are all dyed in America to suit the leading fashion. The bleaching is done by inclosing the stalks in a box with burning brimstone. The plaiting, next in order, is done mostly by women and girls, while the straw is in a damp state, and after the braids are pressed flat they are put in rolls of xty yards, packed in bales and ready for exportation. Encouraged by their government the Japanese, with their characteristic energy, have recently begun this industry

WHY HATS TURN YELLOW.

When the rolls reach the manufacturer in this country the braids are slightly moistened and then sown together, beginning at the crown and working round until the whole is finished. On the top floor of the straw works are the sulphur rooms, where some of the hats are bleached. It is found that nature or science has provided nothing so powerful in this regard as the sun, and all the sulphur baths and other processes of bleaching are not comparable with a sun bath. Ladies often feel disappointed because their straw hats turn yellow, but this is the natural result of sulphur bleached goods. Such a thing never happens after sun bleaching. When practicable and the weather permits this latter process is used at all the works, and on a fine day rows of hats may be seen on the roof undergoing whitening by the operation of the sun's rays. After being dipped in French glue they are placed in a drying room where the temperature is about 115 degs and where the moisture is extracted by means of rapidly revolving fans, driven at high speed. This leaves the hat in a very pliable condition.

The blocking process is next in order. Looking at a numbered tag which has been previously sewed inside, the workman places the hat on the proper steam heated sectional expanding metal block and presses it into the required size and shape. This blocking machine was invented at the straw works. The hat is then placed on solid metal dies corresponding in size to the blocks above mentioned, and subjected to a powerful hydraulic pressure, which gives it its proper form. If for men and boys, the sweatband is then sewn in, and meanwhile the lace tip for the interior of the crown is prepared by an ingenious machine which has an attachment for cutting it the exact shape and size, as well as for sewing. Putting on the band, the only process requiring handiwork in the making of these goods, is the last operation, and the hat is finished ready for boxing and shipment.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Alligators and the Water Supply.

A Florida newspaper says that the killing off of alligators is having a marked effect on the supply of water in the cattle country. When alligators took possession of a water hole they always kept the mud pushed up on the banks, and even when hundreds of cattle went to the pool, and by crowding and pushing filled it with mud, the alligators soon repaired the damage by digging and pushing back the mud. Now the cattle stand around these holes, which are filled with mud and almost entirely dried up, and wait for rain; the only water they get meantime being from the dew covered grass which they eat at night.—New York Sun.

It was surprising how much easier it was to forgive a man who has done you a real injury than one who wrongs you unintentionally or one you had wronged yourself.—Carl Dunder.

Notice to Perpetuate Testimony

In the Superior Court of the County of Sonoma, State of California.

In the matter of the application of ISAAC LIEBES and CHARLES J. BEHLOW to perpetuate testimony.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT in pursuance of an order made by the Judge of the above-named Superior Court on the tenth day of May, 1888, authorizing and allowing the same, the testimony of Mrs. Anna M. Harding, residing in Sonoma County, State of California, will be taken in the above-entitled proceeding before F. Breitenbach, a Notary Public residing in the town of Sonoma, Sonoma County, State of California, at his office in said town, on WEDNESDAY, the 15th day of August, 1888, at 12 o'clock noon and at such other times to which the same may be continued.

The facts sought to be established by the said testimony are as follows, to-wit: That on or about the 22d day of December, 1873, the aforesaid Anna M. Harding, being then the wife of Isaac Harding, purchased of one Jabish Clement for the consideration of four thousand dollars or thereabouts, that certain lot of land in the town of Sonoma known and designated on the official map of the aforesaid town of Sonoma as out lot number (515) five hundred and fifteen. That the said consideration so paid was money which was the sole and separate property and estate of the said Anna M. Harding, and that the said property thereby became, and was at all times thereafter while owned by her, the separate property and estate of the said Anna M. Harding, and that her husband, Isaac Harding, had no right, title or interest in or to the same.

Witness my hand and the seal of the above-named Superior Court of the County of Sonoma, State of California, this 10th day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight (1888.)

[Seal of Court.] J. F. MULGREW,
County Clerk and Ex-officio Clerk of the Superior Court of Sonoma County, California.

J. R. BRANDON, Attorney for Applicants.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The treatment of many thousands of cases of those chronic weaknesses and distressing ailments peculiar to females, at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has afforded a vast experience in nicely adapting and thoroughly testing remedies for the cure of woman's peculiar maladies.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the outgrowth, or result, of this great and valuable experience. Thousands of testimonials, received from patients and from physicians who have tested it in the more aggravated and obstinate cases which had baffled their skill, prove it to be the most wonderful remedy ever devised for the relief and cure of suffering women. It is not recommended as a "cure-all," but as a most perfect Specific for woman's peculiar ailments.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system, and to the womb and its appendages in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a legitimate medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system. For morning sickness, or nausea, from whatever cause arising, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia and kindred symptoms, its use, in small doses, will prove very beneficial.

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhœa, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and tenderness in ovarica, accompanied with "internal heat."

As a regulator and promoter of functional action, at that critical period of change from girlhood to womanhood, "Favorite Prescription" is a perfectly safe remedial agent, and can produce only good results. It is equally efficacious and valuable in its effects when taken for those disorders and derangements incident to that later and most critical period, known as "The Change of Life."

"Favorite Prescription," when taken in connection with the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and small laxative doses of Dr. Pierce's Purgative Pellets (Little Liver Pills), cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder diseases. Their combined use also removes blood taints, and abolishes cancerous and scrofulous humors from the system.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Large bottles (100 doses) $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.
